

The Naval Families Federation (NFF) was established in 2003 to give Royal Naval and Royal Marines' families an independent voice. The impact of separation and mobility on Naval Service families may present challenges that are not commonly experienced by a civilian population.

The NFF works with the Chain of Command, service providers and the Government in order to make them fully aware of the consequences their policies and decisions make on the Naval Service family as a whole. This representation keeps us in line with the other two Services and ensures that Naval Service families' differences are acknowledged and understood.

The Naval Families Federation works from Castaway House in Portsmouth, alongside principal Royal Navy charities.

The families of Royal Naval and Royal Marines' personnel are independent, resourceful people who may be experiencing issues that are affecting their day to day life and think they are unable to voice them. In a constructive diplomatic way we would like to help them do just that!

The NFF produce a free magazine called 'Homeport', which contains useful information for Service families. Homeport is distributed by the Royal Navy and Royal Marines to naval families worldwide. If you would like a copy please pop into the NFF office or complete the online

contact form

Why not sign up to receive the NFF e-update. This e-mail update is issued every other month and provides a short, snappy roundup of news and information of interest to families. To join the mailing list please e-mail: info@nff.org.uk

Find us on Facebook

Follow us on Twitter

Join us on LinkedIn

The NFF Team

(from front to back) Kim Richardson, Jackie Jackson,

Jane Williams, Sarah Woods, Alison Wright and Emma Prince

Kim Richardson - OBE!

Click here to read an article in Portsmouth's local paper, The News, on our Chair's appointment of an OBE and the work of the NFF.